

CALIFORNIA WATER LAW JOURNAL

Learn and Write About Legal Issues in Water Law

February 8, 2014

Dear California Water Law Symposium Attendee:

The California Water Law Journal is offering you the opportunity to publish articles about panels at this year's Symposium at UC Hastings. Please consider submitting a piece for publication on any topic involving the Symposium, between 1000-2000 words, using Bluebook or California Style Manual endnote citations. Student submissions are welcome.

Our Journal is a multi-school collaboration, currently involving students and adjunct faculty at Pacific McGeorge and UC Davis King Hall. The Water Law Journal provides a unique forum with a focus on water law where any student or professional may engage in high-quality research and academic discourse to publish candid and current legal analyses. This is an excellent opportunity to get more involved in California water law, politics, and scholarship. So far, we have published articles about water courts, the public trust doctrine, Proposition 218, and short-term water transfers.

To submit an entry, please e-mail us by Saturday, March 1st at waterlawjournal@gmail.com with the following information:

1. Name and affiliation
2. Panel(s) attended
3. Abstract of article topic

Upon receipt of this information, you will receive an e-mail with your assigned editor from the Board of Advisors and a due date for the entry. Once we receive a confirmation from the Board member that the entry is publishable, it will be posted.

We offer our special thanks to UC Hastings for hosting the 2014 California Water Law Symposium and allowing us to take part. This event could not have happened without the many hours of preparation by panel and Symposium co-chairs, faculty advisors, directors, trustees, and, of course, the panelists. You can also visit us at www.waterlawjournal.com for more information or e-mail us with any questions.

Thank you for attending the 2014 California Water Law Symposium.
